Frequently asked Questions:

Q : What is the cost of becoming a CTFA member?

A: Fees are based on the applicant's company turnover. A "once-off" registration fee applies to new members.

Q : Does CTFA test samples or are they sent away for testing?

A: CTFA does not test products, but provides regulatory technical advice such as:- guidelines, reviews of labels, packaging, INCI ingredient listings including claims and product statements to ensure compliance.

Q : Does CTFA approve labelling information on the packaging of the products?

A: CTFA does not endorse products but will review and advise on remedial recommendations and guidelines to assure product and packaging compliance.

Q : What does the CTFA Website offer?

A: There is an added value log in section that entitles Members to access the "Members Only" benefits. This features privileged technical information, international content, harmonised updates, local developments and packaging guidelines.

Q : How do I access the CTFA Compendium?

A: As a CTFA Member you are automatically entitled to a Website Members Only Login and Password to access the CTFA Compendium.

If you are a Non-Member you can also access the CTFA Compendium by completing an online order form which includes a nominal fee.

Q : How does CTFA transfer relevant technical information to Members?

A: Dependant on content and topics, CTFA conducts regular Seminars and Workshops in all three main centres, Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban. From time to time CTFA issues Technical Newsletters, Newsflashes and General Cosmetic Snippets.
